YOUNG PEOPLE OF FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH HOLD RALLY AND BUSINESS MEETING

Saturday evening, Sept. 23, the young people of the Baptist Young People's Union of the First Baptist Church held their annual business meeting, at the church, corner Louise and Third. Much business was transacted and election of officers held, with the following result:

Fred Sanford, president.

R. O. Wildman, 1st vice-president.

Vera McPherson, 2nd vice-president.

Margaret McPherson, corresponding secretary.

John L. Losh, treasurer.

Evelyn Kent, pianist.

A hearty vote of thanks to the retiring officers, of which Newton Van Why was president, for the wisdom shown and duty performed, was unanimously adopted.

Big things are planned for the coming year, one of the chief keynotes being evangelism. Towards this end, Daniel 12:3 was selected as a motto for the coming year: "And they that be teachers (wise) shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

Sunday evening, Sept. 24, an enthusiastic rally meeting of the young people was held at 6:30 p. m. with a large attendance. Newton Van Why, retiring president, had charge of the meeting. R. O. Wildman had charge of the devotional program, a feature of which were the fine testimonies from the really young people, as well as the older.

Evelyn Kent very ably handled the subject of "Enthusiasm," and her message was much appreciated by all. The roll call was next in order. John L. Losh gave helpful suggestions along a spiritual line, having as his theme, "Our Spiritual Outlook for the Coming Year." Forrest Jordan rendered a violin solo with much taste and skill. Dorothy Stanton, with "Missions" as her subject, gave very much light on this important subject. Newton Van Why spoke briefly on the relation of the young people's society to the church. The new president, Fred Sanford, addressed the young people as to the coming year's work.

At the evening church service the pastor, Rev. Vernon Cowsert, delivered a wonderful address, especially to the young people, taking as his theme, "The Secret of Success." He took for his text Matthew 16:25, "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it." Some of the pointed and compressed remarks were: Success means sacrifice. . . . Sacrifice of ignorance for information. . . . Recognition of our own lack of knowledge. . . . Sacrifice of leisure for labor. . . . Our greatest possible happiness is through labor. Success also means sacrifice of idleness for industry. . . . Sacrifice of policy for principle. . . . He elaborated all his points in a manner that made the message one that the young people will not soon forget. He also pointed out that success might mean the sacrifice of our lives for Him who sacrifices His life for us.

The pastor's message was a very fitting close to a very fine rally and the young people look forward to the year's work with enlarged vision and hopefulness of big things being accomplished.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

What proved to be a very pleasing affair was the birthday dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Blake Franklin, in honor of Mrs. Franklin, Friday evening, Sept. 22, at the Franklin residence, 1498 W. Third street. The house was tastefully decorated and the hostess received many beautiful presents from her friends. After dinner a most enjoyable time was spent in song and music. Those present were: Mrs. Mabel Ocker, Miss Veta Franklin, Miss Grace Schermerhorn of Long Beach, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Chappell, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Van Dyke, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Blake Franklin.

POWER OF FAITH

REV. H. V. ADAMS PREACHES POWERFUL SERMON IN THE M. E. CHURCH

In the absence of the pastor, the Rev. B. D. Snudden, of the First Methodist Episcopal church, at conference, the pulpit was ably filled by the Rev. H. V. Adams of Glendale. The lecture subject was contained in the first 16 verses of Numbers, 13th chapter, which contains the names and a description of the men selected by Moses after God's direction to go down and search the land of Canaan and report back to Moses and the people of Israel.

We are living, said the speaker, in an important age of the world's history. The question which confronts us is this, "What is the supreme need of the hour?" If we attend the public meetings of the political parties who are now engaged in a national contest the speaker will tell us that his political party represents the supreme need of the hour. The next night we may attend another gathering and the speaker will tell us that his party advocates the supreme need of the hour and so on with the other parties.

But this cannot be for there can be only one supreme need of the hour. There may be a number of important and weighty matters but in the logic of the case there can be only one supreme need. It is not a currency that will be so elastic that everyone can buy an automobile and gasoline enough to run it. It is not a sounder banking system or bigger navy or a large standing army. For a large standing army would be a curse to our nation. None of these things, however important they may be, are the supreme need of the hour. But here in a small clipping is a definition—the definition—"The need of the hour is a revival of faith, a return to the religion of our fathers, a morality based on the Bible."

Whence this definition? Who can tell? It is not the expression of a minister or of a reformer but a clipping from the Wall Street Journal of New York, the representative of a supposedly mercenary crowd. But a profound truth nevertheless. The supreme need of the age is a revival of faith. We fail to accomplish a great many things in life because of lack of faith and undeveloped, latent powers. We are mutually an exceedingly lazy lot. As a rlue we don't do anything we actually do not have to, and as a consequence we lose many blessings physically, mentally and spiritually. But we can rise above the normal and accomplish supernormal achievements.

Elias of the Old Testament is a notable example. He was a man of like passions to us. Subject to discouragements and doubts he rose above them and performed some mighty miracles and was signally blessed of the Lord. Moses was another example called of the Lord to lead the chosen people out of bondage to the promised land.

With that end in view the 12 mighty men, one from each of the 12 tribes, was sent to reconnoiter. Ten of them filled with fear, distrust and doubt made a majority report and urged the dangers and difficulties and giants in the way. But the two (Caleb and Joshua) made a minority report of hope and cheer and encouragement. Their report was adopted and the march resumed, and the names of Caleb and Joshua are handed down to the following generations, while the names of the ten are entirely forgotten. It is largely lack of faith that keeps many of us out of the Canaans of our life. That faith gives victory over great obstacles is evidenced in the life of Gideon and his victory with 300 men over the Amalekites who were as numerous as the grasshoppers.

Faith is that element that enables minorities to overcome majorities—is the golden key to the storehouse of God—is the throttle that controls the mighty engine—is the electric switch that sets machinery in motion. It is faith that tunnels through mountains, that builds railroads across deserts; bridges rivers; lays cables under the ocean. It is faith through the instrumentality of superhuman men and women that frees the slave and lifts the whole world nearer to God.

A large audience was present in the evening to hear an equally interesting sermon on "The Champion Wrestler—Jacob." By special request Mr. Adams will repeat the lecture on "Well Diggers" that he gave several months ago in the Methodist church. He will deliver this lecture in the Adventist church, corner 3rd and Isabelle streets, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 26, 8 o'clock. Seats free. Public invited.

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Several Zeppelins appeared over Bucharest last night and dropped bombs on the city. The Roumanians had been expecting the visit and the city was darkened. ALLIES WIN VICTORIES IN ROUMANIA

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

PARIS, Sept. 25.—The Allies won several victories in Roumania yesterday. Fighting continues on all the Roumanian fronts. The combined armies of the Roumanians and Russians had a severe encounter at Loustafraze with a strong Teuto-Bulgarian force. The Roumanians say that the Bulgars were driven back several miles. Both armies in in the Dobrudja are apparently maneuvering for a strategic victory. The Russo-Bulgar line of entrenchments is very strong and it is doubtful if Von Mackensen will attempt to storm it.

LABOR LEADERS PLAN BIG WALKOUT

MORE THAN A MILLION UNION WORKERS MAY STOP WORK NEXT WEDNESDAY

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

NE WYORK, Sept. 25.—There is every likelihood that the union labor leaders will order a big walkout next Wednesday. So far as can be learned everything is ready for the strike. It is planned to direct a paralyzing blow at New York industry and manufactures of all kinds. The leaders calculate that the employers are likely to be intimidated. On the other hand the masters state that everything is ready to handle the street car traffic and the police say that they are ready to protect the men who take the strikers' places.

GREEK EX-PREMIER GOES TO SALONIKI

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Foreign office has been informed that Ex-Premier Venizelos went to Saloniki today. It is believed that his visit to that port has something to do with the revolt in the island of Crete. Venizelos himself is a Cretan and is quite a power in the island. King Constantine continues to puzzle the people by his successful maneuvers to prevent Greek participation in the war.

THIRTEEN THOUSAND PENNSYLVANIAN GUARDSMEN START ON LONG MARCH IN MEXICO

FORT BLISS, Sept. 25.—Thirteen thousand Pennsylvanian militiamen started this morning on a hundred mile hike through the sands of the frontier. They are all in pretty good shape and having been hardened up quite a bit since they were sent to the frontier, are likely to make a good record. The men are eager for exercise and welcome the march as a variation of the monotony of camp life.

NOTES AT EXPOSITION

DOROTHY SHERMAN TELLS OF MARINE AND BOTANICAL WONDERS AT SAN DIEGO

We made a trip to San Diego to visit the Exposition. We went by boat, which was a great experience for me. We saw a great many seagulls, I think they are so pretty, pure white with yellow beaks and strong gray wings. They are like the ocean, wild and free. But the really wonderful thing we saw was a school of flying fish. They were great large creatures over two feet long, and they travelled by leaping out of the water several feet, swimming a ways, and then leaping again. There must have been hundreds of them. The Exposition buildings are situated in Balboa Park, the largest artificial park in the world. The first glimpse you catch is the dome and spire of the California building rising from among the palms and semi-tropical shrubs at the summit of a hill. They are all of old Spanish architecture, and with their mission bells, flower-filled patios, vine-covered arcades and open plaza form a quaint Spanish city.

In the California building we saw a fine exhibit of stuffed birds, mounted and placed in natural surroundings. The quail, towhee, thrasher, etc., on the ground, the sea-birds on rocks and sand near the sea, the game birds among the grasses surrounding small ponds, birds of prey on some barren tree or inaccessible rocky heights, and the song birds among trees and shrubs.

One of the most interesting buildings we thought was the Bureau of Fisheries. The tanks of fish were set back in the walls forming wonderful living pictures. One of the most beautiful was the tank of golden perch, fishes about ten inches long by seven or eight and of a brilliant orange color. The rat fish was a peculiar creature, long and narrow, with a queer pointed head, and when he hid among the rocks with his nose sticking out he looked exactly like a rat.

The skulpin was about ten inches long and very queer looking, being mottled and streaked with shades of brown, gray and yellow until he looked as if he were covered with lichens. Skulpins look something like horned toads in coloring, but the colors are much richer; they are very pretty.

The sheepshead has a queer face, and if you have a good imagination you can see a resemblance to a sheep. The toadfish are so called because when they bury themselves in the sand with just their heads sticking out they look very much like toads.

There were eels, large and small; some of the large ones were four feet long and about a foot in circumference. One of those creatures with their ugly snaky heads would frighten anyone into telling tales of sea snakes and sea monsters. Perhaps they were what gave rise to the stories of sea-snakes and the like believed to inhabit the ocean in the time of Columbus.

The stingray was the queerest of all. We called them "ghosts of the deep." They look something like an ordinary fish except for their great thin flippers (I guess you would call them) and their long thin tail. But underneath they are perfectly flat and white with a funny wide mouth that works and moves, and a pair of breathing holes that look like a second pair of eyes. Then they have a ring of breathing holes on their front, and altogether they look just like ghosts draped in white sheets with funny faces. The shovel-nose sharks were something like them, but much longer, with another set of fins. The Zebra shark was a beautiful, spotted creature.

There were queer anemones that seem half flower and half animal. The skate, I think, was a fish that looked very much like the stingray except that it had a longer tail. There was a case of salmon's eggs that looked like small pink grapes, and several cases of baby fish about an inch long.

In the Plaza de Panama are hundreds upon hundreds of pigeons. I bought some grain to feed them, and they flew all over me, lighting on my head and shoulders and any place they could get a footing. I put some grain between my lips and they ate it right out.

The Botanical Building is one of the most beautiful. It is a great, high affair made of laths like a hothouse or green house, enclosing a dream garden. The paths are lined on each side with banks of rare flowers, ferns and beautiful shrubs. Palms are there and many other beautiful trees, and little ponds lined with choice flowers, orchids, many of which I did not know the name, and ferns trailing their leaves in the water among the lily pads and blossoms. It was all cool and shady and beautiful. There were huge cages of brilliant tropical birds. One pair looked rather out of place, for we thought they were ordinary blackbirds without any tails. But as both of them had no tails, and had short little wings, we decided they must be some queer variety of bird.

While on a trip around the bay we saw a wild bird. It was a heron or crane or something like that,—we were too far away to see distinctly. It stood on one long leg in the shallow water and craned its long neck around as the car went by.

We came back on the Harvard Friday. The sea was very rough and everyone became sea-sick. We escaped, however. We got acquainted with one of the sailors who told us that the flying fishes we had seen before were porpoises, and he told us about the real flying fish, several of which we saw later on. He said they can fly until their wings get dry, then they have to dip in the water again. Those we saw looked very much like the little gulls that were skimming over the water. But they went straight ahead instead of circling about, and flew just about a foot above the water. I watched them until they disappeared from view and they never once went in the water. They were very much smaller than porpoises.

We had the loveliest time at the Fair and saw a great many wonderful things which would take too long to tell.

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1916

DEVELOPING AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS

Everyone must have learned by this time that the war in Europe has caused a vast increase in the prices of printing paper all over the United States. Whether those enormous advances have been justified or not is another question. At the same time the shortage in paper of all kinds has been a great stimulation to American inventive ingenuity and the raw materials of the big forests of the Southern States and other parts of the country are saving this land from "war shortage" of dyes, acids, pulps and other materials.

Just at present a Convention of American scientists or rather of scientific societies, with thousands of members, is meeting in New York City, under the leadership of President Dr. Charles H. Herty, of the American society. This clever scientist says that the embargo on so many of the scientific products of Europe that has been placed by the blockade of the ports of the Central Powers and the decrees in council concerning contraband of war issued by the Allies has been a great blessing to the United States.

It would seem that now the stimulation afforded to the American inventive brain by the necessity of providing for our own necessities is so great that by the time the war is finished this country will have learned to be independent of the manufactures of dyes and chemicals of the European countries. Alcohol, used in the arts; dyes of every kind, acids and wood pulps are now being manufactured on a gigantic scale. "It is significant," says Dr. Herty, "of the advance made in these matters that among our exhibits we have a great many articles for which up till now we have been entirely dependent on old Europe."

It is certain that once emancipated this country will no longer be forced to watch unscrupulous dealers force up prices on articles which they have had stored in their warehouses for years, possibly, certainly for several seasons. Were this kind of thing to go on much longer it might be necessary to invoke the federal power as has been done in other countries. In the matter of print paper, for instance, it is believed that many warehouses have taken the precaution long ago to order in enormous stocks and while those stocks were bought at prices that were almost normal the paper firms have now advanced the price until it is many times greater than it should be.

It is to prevent such unjust treatment of customers that the Scientific exhibit is now being held in New York City. What is seen there will stimulate manufacturers all over the country. It will encourage Americans to go ahead until within this great country's borders everything will be produced that is requisite for the nation's welfare and prosperity.

Until that is the case the United States will always be at the mercy of whatever bloodthirsty nations take a fancy to cutting each other's throats in any part of the earth and on the seas. When Germany cut off the supply of potash for glass-making this country substituted soda, of which we have plenty. By and by between the Searles lake supply of potash and that to be obtained from the Pacific ocean kelp the United States will have the potash also.

NEW YORK'S SLUR ON COWBOYS

Apparently New York and the effete East generally have become so sophisticated that the wild and woolly west no longer appeals to it. Whosoever exploded the idea that the West is the home of "chaps" and lariats, and cowboys who ride into Los Angeles or San Francisco, by day or night and shoot up either place has done the cowboy a very poor service. It is true that you can find cowboys made to order at the thousand-and-one film ranches in California and that the cattle ranchers now use autos for the purpose of carrying out their round-up. It is true that the respectable ranchers of Glendale, who have vast ranges in other states as well as in this, would listen with astonishment to the idea that the "movies" convey to the public concerning western cowboys and sheriffs, bucking bronchos and games of poker where "the roof's the limit." Nevertheless it is rather astonishing to learn that New York has been disillusioned on these points also.

Nowadays the cowboy is a professional who goes the round of the fairs and gathers in the prizes, usually cash, which are awarded by enthusiastic societies, who collect the money from enthusiastic worshipers of the times that are past. They are determined not to permit the cowboy to die. He must hold on and never "pull leather." There however the cowboy myth ends. The ranches are quiet and commonplace. No more does the old chanty "Oh bury me out on the lone prairie" send its mournful variations and prolongations through the smoke-thick atmosphere of the ranch house. The modern rancher, like the modern general in battle, directs the movements of his cattle by telephone with a map of his vast ranch before him on the table.

However, it is wonderful that the chappies of New York got on to the game and turned down the faithful few who went to the Modern Babylon to show the New Yorkers how they don't do it in the wild west. The stranded "Ham" often had to walk the ties, suffering from the tender mercies of a cruel public; but for the first time in history has it been recorded that a group of western cowboys and girls have been stranded—and in New York. "That was the most unkindest cut of all." The cowboys and girls were engaged to exhibit at what was called the "Stampede"; but the mere mention of the name "cowboy" seems to have stampeded the audience, which never appeared and the money which was not forthcoming when the broncho-busters demanded their pay. Probably somebody paid the way of stranded cowboys and cowgirls home.

Now the cowboy has learned a lesson. He refuses to go on with his stunt or stunts unless the very hard cash is brought out and counted down before him; then placed in escrow and handed over the moment he has fulfilled the part assigned him. Imagine! At Pendleton, Oregon, which almost everyone has seen, if not in the flesh at least in moving pictures, the other day 100 wild horse tamers, broncho busters, steer bulldoggers and others refused to enter on the competition for the championship of the west unless they could actually see the $5000 offered in prizes. Alas, alas! the glory has departed.

CONDITIONS IN OREGON

H. T. ANDERSON SAYS FARMING OF ALL KINDS IS ACTIVE AND PROSPEROUS

After a period of several weeks spent in Oregon, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Anderson, 203 Orange street, have returned to Glendale convinced that the neighboring state is prosperous and active. Leaving Glendale Aug. 8 they took the train to Klamath Falls, where they formerly resided. "In fact," said Mr. Anderson, "I was one of the pioneers of that section. It is amazing to note the progress that has been made there within the past few years. That is a great lumber country. Immense forests of Oregon pine are just being opened up. There are many millions of cubic feet of lumber there. I would not attempt to state how many but enough to keep the district busy for years to come.

"We visited the town of Merrill, where we formerly lived and found it progressive and prosperous. All round that district are fine stock farms. In the early days of stock farming we used to breed Herefords and Durhams, fine large beef cattle. We also used to breed horses and had the reputation of having a valuable lot of animals. Cattle and horse-breeding still continue to flourish, but as regards the cattle there has been a change.

"No more do you see the big Durham or the impressive Hereford. The farmers have turned to raising dairy cattle. Instead of talking of beef on the hoof they now give you long talks on the merits of Holsteins and Jerseys and are skilled in all the mysteries of cheese-making.

"Oregon is a famous milk and cheese country and its products are known all over the United States and even Europe. The climate is cool and favorable to dairying.

"Klamath Falls is developing with great rapidity. It is on the eve of further railroad development, which is certain to start a new era in its growth. Everywhere are sawmills and the constant hum of the machines that are splitting lumber for boxmaking. There are many box factories and that business is also growing rapidly.

"After leaving Oregon we went to the northern part of California and visited Chico and Hornbrook in Shasta county. There the chief industry is fruit ranching. That is a fine apple country and other deciduous fruits grow well there. A good deal of stock is raised and the soil is favorable to alfalfa.

"I was astonished to mark the growth of the rice industry in Butte and Glenn counties. There are now thousands of acres of that country producing rice, which is of good quality and brings good prices. Round Chico almonds and prunes are largely grown and it is good grain and hay land. I am naturally interested in the products of the soil and I was pleased to see the advance that is being made everywhere in modern farming methods. We returned to Glendale invigorated by our trip north and glad to return to the amenities of the Glendale climate."

THROUGH THE EAST

MRS. I. E. WEAVER TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN WISCONSIN AND KANSAS

"Nothing can equal the contrast between the Middle West and the Pacific coast than the wonderful greenness that greets the eye when the State of Illinois or the State of Wisconsin is reached," said Mrs. I. E. Weaver, Kenwood street. "We left Glendale May 30 and traveled straight to Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The contrast between the freshness of that State and the aridity of the western States was very marked. I was commenting on this contrast to a friend while I was in Wisconsin. 'You might see fit to alter your opinion,' she said, 'when you found the winter come, the temperature down to 20 below zero and the wind howling around your dwelling as though it would devour you.' There is some truth in that. We get accustomed to California's mild winters and are apt to forget what an old-fashioned winter is like.

"While in Milwaukee," said Mrs. Weaver, "I paid a visit to the post-office building where I was taken by a friend through the weather bureau. I was much interested in the batteries of thermometers they have. Self-registering thermometers of the finest and most accurate make. The seismograph, which records the tremors of the earth and tells immediately when a great earthquake has occurred in any part of the world. The rain gauges that measure the rainfall, the anemometer that measures the velocity of the wind and the charts that show the variations of heat and cold, wind and rain, high and low pressure all over the United States from day to day.

"Leaving Milwaukee," continued Mrs. Weaver, "we went to our old home in Elkhorn, where we had spent ten years. This is a fine agricultural country. The newspapers, like the fields, are full of hogs and cattle. There are many fine dairy farms there and the milk has quite a reputation. Now there is a milk condensing plant at Delavan, which puts up a great quantity of milk for which there is a great demand. The farmers send their milk to be condensed there. The factory either purchases the milk or will condense it at a charge of $1.75 for 100 pounds. The farms are fine specimens of good and intelligent farming. The farmers are making money. Everywhere is the appearance of wealth and prosperity. Every farmer has an automobile or two and life flows along like a song in Southern Wisconsin.

"From this charming and contented spot we went to visit our relatives, the Williams, at Lauderdale lakes. This is a chain of three lakes, where our people, who live in Elkhorn in the winter, have their summer residence. Lauderdale lakes are about 8 miles from Elkhorn. There we enjoyed a fine time. Some of us fished and others merely walked about and visited but all benefited by the fine air.

"Thence we went to Columbus and visited throughout Richland county. There we visited a friend, Dr. McCorcal, who has much land, a sawmill and the leading store. He is the richest man in that town. He has a splendid yard stored with every species of hardwood and does a big business all over the middle west.

"From Richland county we went back to the lakes and from the lakes we went to Elkhorn and thence to Chicago. We came home by way of Kansas. That state is dried up and burnt up compared to the green east, but the heat which was so fierce this year seems to have been good for the wheat crop. Everywhere we saw immense piles of wheat on the ground, awaiting either transportation or storage. The crops have been enormous everywhere. Unfortunately the corn crop was a failure; but the wheat crop will compensate for it.

"We were really glad to get back to Glendale. There is no doubt that this climate wears well and one generally finds it as one expects to find it."

CHAPTER L OF P. E. O.

Chapter L of P. E. O. will hold the first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. D. E. Maxwell, 203 N. Kenwood street, Wednesday, Sept. 27, at 2:30 p. m. A full attendance is desired. A fine program has been arranged.

TRAINING THE CHILD

O. H. JONES PUTS HEALTH AND STRENGTH AS FIRST REQUISITE FOR HUMAN RACE

By obeying the laws of Nature man can round out his life to its fullest period, and at last full of years and honor, return it to the Lord of the harvest in that day when He shall come to make up his jewels.

Every child that is born into this life is entitled to such care and treatment from its parents and guardians as will enable it to enjoy this privilege to its fullest extent. And he is entitled to live out the full term that was originally allotted him in the great plan of creation, in order that he may have the time and opportunity to bring all his powers to maturity and full development. In no other way can he become fully equipped for the full enjoyment of a future life. All Nature teaches us that there is a resurrection after a period of rest.

Contrast a child or a youth with the limited degree of development of the affections, and the physical and mental powers which he is capable of attaining, with the man or woman who has had time and opportunity to develop and bring to maturity all the powers of the mind and body, and to develop the affections; and see the difference. One is fitted to enjoy life and perform all of its duties; the other, well, the other is like green fruit which is plucked when it is only quarter grown, is cannot mature.

Dr. W. H. Smith, in Health Culture for April, under the heading, "Responsibility of Parenthood," says, "Babies are the valuable product in any country. For the life of today we need babies pure and clean, with health, vigor and efficiency. Our obligation to the future demands that we see that the seed be good and clean at the planting, as much as from the growth.

"The child has the right to be well born, which is to have a virile fatherhood and a chaste and beautiful motherhood. The child has also the right to the full development of its body and its mind. This it often does not receive. Frequently the parents are too poor to give their children the education necessary to fit them to meet their duty as citizens.

"It is a crime not only against the child, but also against society, to permit one to grow up without receiving the best society has to give in the line of intellectual development, not only for its own sake, to fit it for the duties of life, but also for that of society, and through the immortality of parenthood transmit themselves to the ages to come.

"If parents do not furnish this intellectual equipment, society ought to do it. The welfare of the child and its usefulness for life depends upon its childhood and society has too great an interest in the labor, power, intelligence, and morality of its citizens to afford to have any child ruined."

The doctor is all right in his moralizing as far as he goes; but he does not get out of the groove of glittering generalities which all of the writers run in, whenever they attempt to touch upon this subject.

It is not the labor power and commercial value of the children that is of most interest to society; but the preservation of the children if society wishes to perpetuate itself. And the commercial value of child life—the sordid and degrading side—should not be allowed any weight as against the rights of humanity and what is due to the child.

The labor power and intellectual development amount to but little without health and life. What the child needs most, and what is of incalculable benefit to society, is a thorough education in the law of physiology, health and nutrition; so that every one will know how to live and conserve life. A general statement that life and health are preserved by obedience to the laws of physiology does not get one anywhere, what people need to know is, what the laws of physiology are; what their requirements are, and how to observe them.

Intellectual development is necessary, and all right for them who survive until they are old enough to be educated; but how about the millions that do not reach that age? Education that will enable parents to raise their children in health and strength is what is needed first, and above everything else.

If it is a crime against the child and against society to permit one to grow up without receiving the best society has to give in the line of intellectual development, how much greater must be the crime against the child and against society, to permit one to grow up—in this day of enlightenment when such vast sums of money are spent for education—in total ignorance of the physiological laws of life, and without any knowledge of the science of health and nutrition. And how grave the responsibility which rests upon society when it allows, not only one, but millions to grow up without receiving this knowledge.

Dr. J. H. Kellogg in Good Health says: "The great problem before the world is not the settlement of the horrible European war. The really big question is how to save the human race from degeneracy and extinction. Chronic disease kills 750,000 people in the United States every year, twice as many as would

Auto-Intoxication—What It Means

It is hard to believe that the food we eat and the things we drink can make even the most sober of us "drunk". But—it is true!

This is what is meant by auto-intoxication. The retention in the stomach of undigested, fermenting food—the clogging of the intestines by putrefactive waste matter—give rise to a veritable Pandora's box of ills. Indeed—there are those who maintain that the absorption of poisons from the colon—or large intestine—is the indirect cause of 90 per cent of all disease.

Again—you must know that auto-intoxication is a very common, chronic complaint. Nor are the symptoms confined alone to the headache, finnicky appetite and lassitude so characteristic of chronic constipation.

It lowers your vitality—renders you more susceptible to disease—and, certainly, reduces your efficiency. For—how can your mental house be in order when your stomach and bowels are out of order?

Proper attention to diet—adequate bowel movements daily effected by simple, natural means—together with a course of eliminative treatments at this institution: these are the things you should do at once to rid your system of these body poisons that sap your strength—steal your nerve energy—and keep you only half alive!

Treatment Rooms open 9 A. M. to 6 P. M., except Saturday. Trained Nurses of both sexes in attendance. For rates and appointment telephone Glendale 2 or Home 1213

ABUSE OF CREDIT

The commonest form of the abuse of credit in the past has been the issue by governments of cheap money. Possibly the world has grown too wise to fall again into the trap of this delusion. But it is doing, or permitting, practically the same thing in other forms. The improper expansion of credit within the last generation exceeds by far in its volume and in its evil effects all the currency inflation of the last hundred years all over the world. The excessive capitalization of trusts and of some less spectacular enterprises has much the same effect as an issue of cheap money. Stocks and bonds are put out which represent little or nothing in the shape of actual values. A concern which, fifteen or twenty years ago would have thought it plunging to enlarge its capital stock to half a million dollars will incorporate today for ten millions. The purpose is to get out sheaves of securities and sell them for cash, regardless of their actual value or probable return. So long as we have no effective laws compeling all stocks and bonds to be paid for at their full face value either in cash, property or service at a fair valuation, so long will this evil continue. —James D. Hill in the 'Bulletin" of the National Association of Credit Men.

THE TELEPHONE GAME

The equipment for this game is simple—merely paper and pencil for each player except one, and for him an imaginary telephone. A pasteboard mailing tube will serve the purpose well enough.

The player at the telephone carries on a short conversation with an imagniary friend supposed to be at the other end of the line, says the Youth's Companion. The other players note the speaker's words, and when he has finished they try to fill in the friend's answers. Of course no two papers will be alike.

For example, the player at the telephone says:

"Hello. . . . Yes. . . . No. . . . How many? . . . In about a month, I think. . . . That's a good idea. . . . Good-by."

One player's paper may read:

"Hello."

"This is Sydney. Is that you, Jack?"

"Yes."

"Did you know we have some new neighbors?"

"No."

"Next door,—name's Spencer,—moved in last week. Jolly crowd. Lots of young folks."

"How many?"

"Two girls and three boys and one little fellow. And the father and mother are as jolly as the rest. When are you going to the beach?"

"In about a month, I think."

"Then you'll be here for some of the sport. You know there isn't any fence between our yard and the Spencers' at the rear. We're going to make a tennis court by laying it out across the two yards."

"That's a good idea."

"Come over Saturday and we'll plan it. Good-by."

"Good-by."

Another player's paper, based on the same words, might read:

"Katherine?"

"Yes."

"This is Mary. Have you any engagement for this afternoon?"

"No."

"Then expect me. I want to talk with you. I've got some more names on my list for Flo West's linen shower."

"How many?"

"Eight in all. And Ruth has a new plan—that when we give the shower we give books at the same time. You know all of Flo's books were lost when their house burned. Of course we can't stock a bookcase, but we can give her a start. When does Flo expect Dick back?"

"Good. That will give us time to carry the plan out before he comes. We want to get all Flo's classmates into it."

"That's a good idea."

"I knew you'd think so. I'll tell you more this afternoon. Good-by."

Of course, the fun consists in the variety of conversations made from the same foundation.

THE SMALL STORE MAN

There is so much of this big town stuff that it puts a crimp in a lot of us "small fry" outside on the edge of town, that are trying to keep our prices down, and yet make enough to pay the rent and the doctor too, and the nurse he sent; while we know we can's sell you all you use, in silks and satins and autos and we know we can't sell you all you and never can; for we're only the little outside man.

But you might drop in just once in a while, for a paper of pins or a pleasant smile; for these little things held the small store man; so jolly him up as much as you can; and let him know that you know he is here, and any other little cheer, you can send his way, may come back to you another day.

Because if you'll only stop and think, you yourself may some time want a drink of Cola Coke or lemon pink; or a pair of sox or a tie for Jim and you wouldn't want to go all the way in, to a great big store with its noise and din. And while you're thinking isn't it true that you need us as we need you. So come in and see us and help us through this fight we're making against a few of those big fellows with lots of dough, and we'll both be winners for all you know.

BACK AND FORTH

"Doctor," he said, coughing violently, "what ought a chap to do when he's got the croup?"

The doctor's eye emitted a steely light at the thought of being buncoed out of a free prescription, and he said:

"Thanks, doctor," said the sufferer, as he took his leave, "that's what I'll do then."—Buffalo News.

TRAINING THE CHILD

die if we were as healthy as we were thirty years ago.

"The average man of thirty years has today only three-fourths as many years to live as he had thirty years ago."

Dr. Elmer Lee, Editor of Health Culture, says: "Feel that sickness is unnatural, unnecessary, and costly. We pity the sick and lavish effort and wealth in providing care houses, yet we do not teach either the well or the sick the law of health nor the science of foods and nutrition, because we lack competent health teachers."

This is a pretty severe arraignment against our philanthropy, civilization, and professed love for humanity. Dr. Lee does not make this statement without knowing well what he is talking about. For the doctor is no spring chicken in the practice. He is sixty years of age and a regular practitioner of the old school of medicine.

The doctors, the physiologists, and the scientists tell us that ignorance is the underlying cause of all sickness and disease; that sickness and disease are unnatural, unnecessary, and costly; and that the large mortality among children and youth is a needless sacrifice of human life. And for all that, the carnival of disease still continues, and the grand march of death still goes on with no hand upraised to stay it.

Where are the philanthropists? What are the professed lovers of humanity doing to alleviate these conditions and turn away the scourge? Nothing—absolutely nothing! What is society and our costly educational institutions doing towards providing teachers, or means to teach the law of health and the science of foods and nutrition to the masses, or any one? Nothing—absolutely nothing.

What are the churches and other institutions doing to save man mortal, physical man? Nothing—absolutely nothing. What are they doing to help remove the cause of our physical ills and teach the people the laws of the physical life, and how to observe them? Nothing—absolutely nothing.

It is estimated that the appalling number of fifteen million babies die annually; and the doctors say needlessly.

What are the churches and other religious institutions and societies doing to arrest this horrible slaughter of the innocents, or what the medical journal from which I quoted calls "race murder"—to the insatiable god of ignorance? Nothing—absolutely nothing. What are the churches for if not to save human life and alleviate human suffering?

The great teacher said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

What life did He come to give in greater abundance? The natural, animal, physical life, of course. That was the only life existing on this earth. The people, at that time, were buried under the rubbish of creed, dogma, superstition, and the doctrines and traditions of the elders, to the extent that they were virtually dead to a correct understanding, and the true meaning of life. And He came to wake them up and call them back to life and give them higher, better, nobler, and more exalted ideas of man's place in Nature; and also to give them a better knowledge of the true meaning of life than what they then possessed. In order to accomplish this, and bring it clearly within man's comprehension, man's Creator himself came to this earth; clothed himself with man's human body of flesh and blood, and lived man's physical life. He called himself "the son of man." He was wholly human in his physical life and body. He ate the same food, drank the same drink, breathed the same air, labored with his hands and lived the same physical life as his brethren.

His body was formed and kept in repair by the food he ate, and in the same manner as theirs. His was a natural, physical, perfect, wholly human body, formed out of the dust of the ground; and He lived the natural, physical, human life, with man's nature, and subject to man's limitations the same as His brethren.

He did not debase his nature by becoming man; but he exalted, enobled, honored, and dignified human nature, and raised it up to the plane which it occupied in the beginning. And He gave to the world a living example of what it is possible for man to be if he so desires—not only morally, but physically. And what he must be, both morally and physically, if he wishes to bring himself into harmony with Nature and accord with the Creator. For it was the physical life He exemplified, and the life He came to give abundantly.

His was the divine life, but in a way we do not understand. He laid down the divine life for a time, and took the form and nature of man—one of his creatures—and lived the physical, human life of man, thereby giving a clear, vivid illustration of the high estimation in which He holds Man—physical Man—and the great value he places on human life.

And right here is where we stumble and fall. We do not get hold of the lesson in the right way, or do not rightly understand the lesson which the examples are intended to teach.

I am a firm believer in New Testament Christianity; but I do not believe in all the interpretations men give to it. The only lesson that is drawn and taught from the incarnation of the Creator, and his life on earth, is applied wholly to the saving of the spirit of man in an after life; and Man and his physical life is wholly ignored. Poor old Man you are entirely forgotten in men's estimation; but not so with your Creator.

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." What life? This physical, animal life, of course. He does not give them any other life until after death. All the emphasis is placed upon life, life, life—human life, and man.

Man may have two natures, but they are essentially one as far as life is concerned. And you cannot cultivate and elevate one side of that nature, and save it successfully, and ignore the other side. The physical, animal man is what the Creator formed in the beginning; and he is the foundation for the whole superstructure. And without man to build on there would be no superstructure. Man is first in point of time. Man is what the Creator is interested in, and what he came to save, the physical, animal Man.

The Creator left the spirit life and took upon himself the life He gave to man, in order that man might get a better understanding of life, and fit himself for the place that was his in the great economy of Nature. He did not come to teach men how to die; but how to live.

I want to have you grasp this fact and hold to it fast, for it is of tremendous importance. I want to have you realize that these lessons are to be first applied to this life, and to humanity here. And that the example of a perfect human life was lived by man's Creator. And that it was not given for the purpose of illustrating the way to live the divine life; but the physical life of man.

This physical life is what he created in the beginning. It is what He lived here. It is what he came to magnify and save. And the very fact of his doing this, shows the importance He attaches to life and the physical welfare of humanity.

Man was created for this earth. This earth is his natural home, now, and will be through eternity. He was born out of the earth. He lives off of the earth. He abides on this earth; and his last sleep will be in the earth. On the resurrection morning he will come forth from his long sleep; the breath of the new life will be breathed into his nostrils, and he will begin his life for eternity on the earth made new. You will remember that the place of the New Jerusalem is to be on this earth.

That new earth kingdom is to be peopled by men and women who have successfully passed through the probationary state on earth. Its subjects will be mankind—re-created Man. The Creator has set us an example by his life on earth, which we must literally follow, if we wish to become subjects of that kingdom, not alone on the moral plane; but physically as well. And the physical plane is of the greatest importance.

WHO AM I?

I am the foundation of all business. I am the fount of all prosperity. I am the parent of genius. I am the salt that gives life its savor. I have laid the foundation of every fortune in America, from Rockefeller's down. I must be loved before I can bestow my greatest blessings and achieve my greatest ends. Loved, I make life sweet and purposeful and fruitful. I can do more to advance a youth than his own parents, be they ever so rich. Fools hate me; wise men love me. I am represented in every loaf of bread that comes from the oven, in every train that crosses the continent, in every ship that steams over the ocean, in every newspaper that comes from the press. I am the mother of democracy. All progress springs from me. Who am I? What am I? I am work.—B. C. Forbes.

A colored man employed by an Atlanta merchant was found to be short in his market book accounts, and was accordingly taken to task. He blamed the grocer, claiming that he had tampered with the book.

Whereupon the employer remonstrated further, saying:

"Ah know, Sah," said Tom; "but liars do figger, dat's shore."

GUAM

The Island of Guam was ceded to the United States by Spain by the Treaty of Paris in 1898. The island is in a direct line between San Francisco and the southern part of the Philippine Islands, and distant only 900 miles from Manila. It is thirty-two miles long and has a population of about 8700.
